Centre for Tribal and Customary Law

The tribal people(s) constitute a substantially important part in the rich and diverse conglomeration of Indian population. They have their unique socio-cultural mechanism and ordered behaviour pattern for the maintenance of equilibrium, social order, tranquillity and peace. These mechanisms constitute taboos, social sanctions, ritualistic faiths, obedience to super-natural powers, public opinion, good sense and ethics. These practices constitute the Customary Laws of the tribal society.

However, non-recognition of these customary laws, discrimination and plundering of their culture, customs and values; are some of the grave crimes being done against them by the so-called modern civilized society. Apart from this, exclusion and forceful implementation of policy decisions without keeping in mind the tribal sentiments has further aggravated their anguish. Therefore, there is an imperative need to develop the understanding of tribal, culture, customs, philosophy, laws and issues affecting them.

Until recently, there hadn't been any formal education in this field in India. At this backdrop and to fill-up this much needed gap, the Central University of Jharkhand in the month of August 2012 established the Centre for Tribal and Customary Law.

The Centre holds the prestige of being the first Post-Graduate Teaching and Research Centre in India dedicated exclusively for research and teaching concerning the Customary Laws, Legal and Governance aspects of Tribal People of India.

Present Location

The present location of the Centre is at Brambe, a 25 kilometre drive from Ranchi City, the capital of Jharkhand (India). Placed in the new Academic-Block section of the lush green and beautiful campus of Central University of Jharkhand, the Centre shall move to its permanent location at the Sukuruhutu-Cheri-Manatu region of Ranchi in the forthcoming times.

A total of 500 acres of land has been earmarked for the construction of the University. In the first phase, the State Government of Jharkhand has handed over 319.28 acres of land to the University on 13th January 2012. The construction of the splendid permanent campus is already underway.
